Alan Wickham is an advocate who regularly acts in cases at the intersection of civil and criminal law.

Drawing upon his background as a prosecutor, Alan routinely represents pursuers and defenders in personal injury cases arising out of criminal and non-accidental conduct. In addition, he frequently appears on behalf of participants in Fatal Accident Inquiries throughout Scotland.

Alan receives instructions in judicial review proceedings and is instructed by petitioners and respondents such as the Scottish Criminal Cases Review Commission. He also appears in equality and other human rights cases, regularly appearing on behalf of the defender.

In his criminal and regulatory practice, Alan continues to appear in the High Court and Sheriff Court, building upon the substantial litigation experience gained during his time as both a criminal defence solicitor and prosecutor. Alan has advised regulatory bodies throughout Scotland and continues to represent companies or individuals facing criminal and regulatory proceedings.
