Practice

Charles spent four years as a solicitor before coming to the Bar. He worked for Simpson & Marwick and Morton Fraser. His areas of practice include medical negligence, personal injury and commercial litigation.

As a solicitor, Charles managed a number of complicated Court of Session medical negligence cases, including a high value cerebral palsy case, which ultimately settled with the agreement of a Periodic Payment Order. He was also responsible for a range of personal injury cases both on the pursuer and defender sides, including employer's and public liability cases, motor claims and industrial diseases cases. These included fatal and catastrophic claims.

Charles has acted in commercial and other cases, including breach of missives actions, boundary disputes, employment-related litigation and partnership disputes.

He has worked with a variety of clients, including insurers, commercial clients, local authorities, the MOD, the Scottish government, the Home office and private individuals.

Lectures and seminars

Charles is a tutor in Civil Court Practice for the University of Edinburgh Diploma in Legal Practice.
