Profile

Rebecca balances a mixed practice covering all of the core practice area of Compass: reparation, regulatory crime and inquiries.

Her reparation practice encompasses a broad range of personal injuries actions (including claims for brain spinal injuries, amputations, workplace accidents, industrial disease, road traffic accidents and claims arising from historic abuse) as well as claims arising from clinical negligence. She acts regularly for both pursuers and defenders across all courts, including NPIC and the Court of Session. Rebecca also represents a range of participants in fatal accident inquiries and regulatory tribunals, adopting a strategic approach to her preparation and advice mindful of how those proceedings may impact any other litigation which may run in parallel.

Rebecca's criminal practice complements her civil work. She represents accused individuals and companies at all levels from summary complaints to High Court trials. Her criminal practice also sees her appear in the Appeal Court and she is experienced in proceeds of crime cases.
